The Hamilton College Summer School of English

" . . . reminded me not a little of the Conference of English Teachers at Stratford-on-Avon."

"The cluster of college buildings on the high, cool hilltop was almost as beautiful in its way as the red-tiled river village of Warwickshire."

"The spirit of the two gatherings was singularly alike—a company of clever, earnest men and women—not too large—considering together various aspects of English study, without pedantry and without affectation."

"I was impressed by the combination of intellectual seriousness with a direct simplicity of manner."

"One may question whether many of the colleges will be able to reproduce the peculiar advantages of Hamilton, with its long tradition of interest in oral English."

These are excerpts from an article on the Hamilton Summer School of English by Professor John M. Clapp, printed in the English Journal for December, 1916.

The Short Story in the High School

A COLLECTION OF SHORT STORIES

Edited by L. A. PITTENGER.

Ten typical short stories, with an introduction that treats fully the history, the qualities, and the composition of the short story. Each story is followed by a brief biography of its author, biographical references, criticisms of the story, general references and collateral readings.

REPRESENTATIVE SHORT STORIES

Edited by NINA HART and EDNA PERRY.

An admirable group of typical short stories including several modern stories of the better sort. The majority of the stories are by American writers and they represent truly many phases of American life, as well as a wide variety in theme and treatment.

The book will be very eagerly received by teachers who are seeking fresh and vigorous material for use in the Short Story course.

SHORT STORIES AND SELECTIONS

Compiled and annotated by EMILIE K. BAKER.

This book is made up of many brilliant short passages and a few short stories complete. It is an invitation to young readers to know more and better literature. It is a series of introductions to a larger world than the young reader has yet become acquainted with. Some of the selections are from books whose titles are already familiar, many are from sources that few will know. All of them are within the interest and comprehension of boys and girls of high-school age.

ORAL ENGLISH

A satisfactory correlation of Oral English with certain of the regular composition and literature courses of the secondary schools has been effected by some of the leading high schools of the United States through the use of the inexpensive and compact little text, Elements of Debating, by LEVERETT S. LYON of the Joliet Township High School.

The virtues claimed for this little book by those who have put it into the hands of their pupils are these—

- ☞ It offers an effective way of producing Oral English.
- ☞ Instead of interfering with the regular composition and literature work, it correlates as a stimulating supplement.
- ☞ The book teaches the subject, thus establishing the confidence of the teacher untrained in public speaking and enabling such a teacher to do highly effective work.
- ☞ The book is written by a high-school man familiar with the high-school problem and is soundly within the vocabulary and experience of high-school pupils.
- ☞ A pamphlet, "Aid in Oral English," will be sent for the asking.

WORKING COMPOSITION

By JOHN B. OPDYCKE

*Chairman, Department of English, Julia Richman High School
New York City*

This book presents the work in English from a new point of view—that of a tool or aid essential to success. A minimum of theory is accompanied by the maximum of practice in the use of the types of oral and written English that are of chief importance to those who do the world's work.

In scope the book amply meets the needs of both boys and girls. In vividness and freshness of appeal it is as unique as it is practical in its applied lessons.

Cloth. 350 pages. Illustrated. $1.28

Lewis and Hosis's Practical English for High Schools

By WILLIAM D. LEWIS, Principal, William Penn High School for Girls, Philadelphia, and JAMES FLEMING HOSIC, Managing Editor, The English Journal, Secretary of National Council of Teachers of English, Head of Department of English, Chicago Normal College, Chicago. Cloth, 12mo, 350 pp. approximately. Price $1.00.

THIS book attempts to teach the old subject of English composition in a way that is more informal and interesting than is customary. There is a liveliness of tone to the presentation which is well calculated to appeal to the pupil and spur him on to do the work presented. Each topic begins with illustrative selections, many of them from student themes, and from these suggestive questions bring out the most important principles, which in their turn are made the basis of exercises to be performed by the pupil. There is an absence of formal and formidable rules.

Throughout the work it is the practical side that receives the chief emphasis. The pupil is given a working knowledge of modern business methods. Besides being drilled thoroughly in those fundamental principles that are common to all kinds of good English, his attention is devoted to the use of cards for filing and outlining, the study of business reports, business letters, proofreading, and newspaper writing. An attempt is also made to teach the pupil how to criticize and correct his own work, and how to make correct recitations. A brief review of the essentials of grammar is included.
